

2023 Rule of Law Report - targeted stakeholder consultation

Fields marked with * are mandatory.

Introduction

The annual Rule of Law Report lies at the centre of the European rule of law mechanism, which acts as a preventive tool, deepening multilateral dialogue and joint awareness of rule of law issues. So far, three editions of the Rule of Law Report have been published in 2020, 2021 and 2022.

In the preparation of the first three editions of the Rule of Law Report, the Commission has relied on a diversity of relevant sources, including from Member States, country visits, and stakeholders' contributions collected through the targeted stakeholder consultation [1]. The information provided has informed the Commission's country-specific assessments in preparing the Report. Building on the positive experience from the first three editions of the Rule of Law Report, the Commission is now inviting stakeholders to provide written contributions for the preparation of the 2023 Rule of Law Report through this targeted consultation.

The contribution to be provided should include (1) information on measures taken to implement the recommendations addressed to the Member State in the 2022 Rule of Law report, as well as developments with regard to the points raised in the respective country chapter and (2) any other significant developments since January 2022 [2] falling under the 'type of information' outlined in the next section.

The input should be short and concise and summarise information related to one or more of the areas referred to in the template. You are invited to focus on the areas that relate to the scope of work and expertise of your organisation. Existing reports, statements, legislation or other documents may be referenced with a link (no need to provide the full text). Stakeholders are encouraged to make references to any contributions already provided in a different context or to Reports and documents already published. Contributions should focus on significant developments both as regards the legal framework and its implementation in practice.

If you wish to submit information concerning several Member States, you will have to fill-in the questionnaire separately for each Member States (due to the size of the questionnaire). There is no limit to the number of contributions submitted by a single participant. In such cases, you are not required to repeat the information in the section "about you" that is non-mandatory nor the information on horizontal developments.

Please provide your contribution by 20 January 2023. Should you have any requests for clarifications or encounter difficulties in filling in the questionnaire, you can contact the Commission at the following email address: rule-of-law-network@ec.europa.eu.

[2] Unless the information was already submitted in the consultation for the previous Rule of Law Reports.

III. Media Freedom and Pluralism

Please provide information on measures taken to follow-up on the recommendations received in the 2022 Report regarding media freedom and pluralism (if applicable)

3000 character(s) maximum

During 2022, the government passed a new Act on Media and Act on Publications to replace the old Press Act and the Compulsory Copies Act. The main changes include:

- extending the right to protect the confidentiality of sources to online media. Previously the right only existed for print and broadcast journalists.
- strengthening media ownership transparency including establishing a public register on media ownership and requiring media outlets to report all investments of over 2000 €. This will be established by the Minister of Culture within 30 months
- expanding the role of the Council of Media Services to include oversight of online media providing powers to intervene against online extremism and disinformation.
- It also added, following a last-minute political compromise, a new 'right to expression' for public officials in place of the original proposed 'right for correction' in response to media reports.

IPI welcomes these initiatives on protection of sources and transparency of media ownership and funding and hopes that the ownership transparency rules will prove effective in shining a light on who ultimately controls and benefits from which media.

The last-minute inclusion of a 'right to expression' is regrettable and provides too much power to politicians to express their messages over those of other members of the public. It is also unnecessary in a period where politicians have numerous ways to express themselves publicly through social media.

Other plans the government claimed to be working on but had not finalised included decriminalising defamation and providing better protection for journalists against those seeking to illegally prevent them from doing their jobs. The ministry of Justice also planned to extend the scope of the Freedom of Information Act.

A. Media authorities and bodies

(Cf. Article 30 of Directive 2018/1808)

Measures taken to ensure the independence, enforcement powers and adequacy of resources (financial, human and technical) of media regulatory authorities and bodies

3000 character(s) maximum

Conditions and procedures for the appointment and dismissal of the head / members of the collegiate body of media regulatory authorities and bodies

3000 character(s) maximum

The Council for Media Services members are appointed by parliament for a period of six years, with one-third of the council being elected every two years. By staggering the appointments it is more difficult for any one political faction to establish dominance over the council.

The independence of the council could be further strengthened by extending the mandate of each member to nine years and extending the term of elections from each two years to every three years.

Existence and functions of media councils or other self-regulatory bodies

3000 character(s) maximum

The Council for Media Services regulates impartiality, objectivity and balance in the news and can sanction broadcast media for possible breaches. The council members are appointed by the parliament for a period of six years, with one third of the council being elected every two years. By staggering the appointments it makes it more difficult for any one political faction to establish dominance over the council and indeed the current council is relatively diverse and pluralistic with members associated with several different political parties.

The Antimonopoly office of the Slovak Republic (AMO SR) oversees mergers and acquisitions to maintain competition in the markets including media. The AMO SR only applies economic criteria and should be required to also consider impacts of any media merger on media pluralism and editorial independence in line with the proposals of the European Media Freedom Act.

B. Safeguards against government or political interference and transparency and concentration of media ownership

Measures taken to ensure the fair and transparent allocation of state advertising (including any rules regulating the matter)

3000 character(s) maximum

There are currently no rules regarding the distribution of state advertising to prevent it being used to reward political allies in the media. There is also no formal reporting process of where and how much the government has spent on advertising, making it very difficult to assess the level of the problem.

However, a report by Peter Sabo of Aktuality.sk based on research data found in a series of contracts published in the public registry between August 2018 and September 2020, showed significant imbalances in expenditure. In an objective distribution process the relative amount of advertising received by a media house would reflect the respective audience reach of that media. The study revealed that expenditure clearly disproportionately favoured certain media over others.

The lack of rules and transparency clearly increases the likelihood of abuse of the system.

Safeguards against state / political interference, in particular:

- safeguards to ensure editorial independence of media (private and public)

- specific safeguards for the independence of heads of management and members of the governing boards of public service media (e.g. related to appointment, dismissal), safeguards for their operational independence (e.g. related to reporting obligations and the allocation of resources) and safeguards for plurality of information and opinions
- information on specific legal provisions and procedures applying to media service providers, including as regards granting/renewal/termination of licenses, company operation, capital entry requirements, concentration and corporate governance

Public service media in Slovakia has a long history of political interference experiencing different phases of control followed by relative editorial independence in the past thirty years;

In 2010 a new government merged the public radio and television into one company with one oversight board. It further changed the system of appointments to the board, ending the process of appointments made by civil society organizations (based on the German model) and introducing a system of appointments by the Slovak parliament.

In 2018 the broadcaster faced a crisis following the appointment of Jaroslav Rezník as the new general director the year before. Rezník was formerly head of the state news agency, TASR, where he developed a reputation for political bias in favour of the staunchly conservative SNS political party. Rezník appointed former spokespersons from government ministries as new managers and interfered with the investigative programme removing critical journalists. In March 2018 journalists were banned from wearing ‘#AllforJán’ badges a solidarity slogan with the journalist Jan Kuciak murdered the year before. Over 60 RTVS journalists protested against the political interference with an open letter in April 2018 and many of them subsequently lost their jobs.

The parliament elected a new director, Ľuboš Machaj, in 2022 who invited back some of the journalists that had left because of Rezník. So far, however, few have responded to his offer.

Meanwhile the RTVS is chronically underfunded, having not seen a rise in the license fee since 2003. This underfunding forces the director general to negotiate with the government of the day for additional funding from the state budget. As the negotiations are held behind closed doors, no one knows what favours may be promised to secure the finances. This system further substantially weakens the political independence of the public media.

IPI strongly urges the Slovak government to reform the appointments process for the director general and the oversight board to insulate it further from political interference and to introduce funding guarantees that will enable it to perform its role without government interference;

The 2022 media reforms expanded the role of the Council of Media Services to include oversight of online media providing powers to intervene against online extremism and disinformation. While fighting disinformation is important, particularly in view of the Russian invasion of Ukraine, such powers raise concern about the impartiality of the council and how such powers might be abused to censor legitimate journalism and freedom of expression more broadly.

Transparency of media ownership and public availability of media ownership information, including on direct, indirect and beneficial owners, as well as any rules regulating the matter

The 2022 media law seeks to increase transparency of media ownership by establishing a public register on media ownership and requiring media outlets to report all investments of over 2000 €. This will be established by the Minister of Culture within 30 months.

The current levels of media pluralism in Slovakia are relatively higher than some neighbouring countries, including the Czech Republic.

C. Framework for journalists' protection, transparency and access to documents

Rules and practices guaranteeing journalist's independence and safety, including as regards protection of journalistic sources and communications

The 2022 media reforms included extending the right to protect the confidentiality of sources to online media and journalists. Previously the right only existed for print and broadcast journalists.

More broadly Slovak politics suffers from a culture of hostility towards independent and critical journalists with leading politicians from many parties resorting to insults and threats designed to intimidate and silence critical voices that expose corruption.

This toxic culture was present until the government of Vladimír Mečiar in 1990s as well as more recently under Robert Fico. It arguably helped fuel an environment in which the murder of an investigative journalist became possible. The murder of Jan Kuciak and his fiancé Martina Kušnírová, has strong parallels with that of Daphne Caruana Galizia and the toxic environment created by Maltese political leaders.

The investigation into Kuciak's murder has revealed that almost 30 Slovak journalists investigating corrupt networks in Slovakia were put under surveillance by the police in cooperation with the same corrupt oligarchs, including the main murder suspect, Marian Kocner.

Regrettably lessons have not been learned as the past two years have seen a further rise in political tension around the efforts to prosecute corrupt networks around the former government. The political leaders of both the SMER party and the governing OĽaNO party's Igor Matovič have irresponsibly raised the heat on journalists through dangerous political attacks.

Law enforcement capacity, including during protests and demonstrations, to ensure journalists' safety and to investigate attacks on journalists
