

Federico Steinberg is Senior Analyst at the Elcano Royal Institute and Lecturer in Political Economy at Madrid's Universidad Autónoma. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from the Universidad Autónoma, an MSc in Politics of the World Economy from the London School of Economics and a Master in International Affairs from Columbia University. He has been a consultant for the World Bank in Washington DC, Ghana and Bolivia, and has worked at the Executive Office of the Secretary General at the United Nations headquarters in New York. He is also a frequent contributor to the Spanish and international media and has been invited to deliver speeches in more than 10 countries.

Research areas: Federico Steinberg is an expert in international political economy with a strong background and interest in international trade, finance, development and European economic and monetary union. His research covers a broad spectrum and he has published extensively on topics such as the new dynamics of international trade and the rise of protectionism, various aspects of global economic and trade governance, the eurozone crisis, Brexit, the new global geoeconomic balance of power and the roots of the backlash against globalisation and the liberal world order. His most recent work has appeared in Routledge, the Journal of Common Market Studies, Review of International Political Economy, New Political Economy or Economic Systems Research, as well as in think tank reports and policy papers.