National 2020 R&D target []	The objective is to reach an R&D intensity of 3.76% of GDP until 2020, of which at least two thirds, preferably 70% come from the private sector. In 2011 Austria had an R&D intensity of 2.79%. In 2011 the Federal Ministry of Transport, Innovation and Technology (BMVIT) raised its R&D budget for applied research and innovation to appr. € 420 million (that is an increase of 5% compared to 2010).
	In April 2011 the Council of Ministers decided to develop a principal guide ("Leitkonzept") for public procurement stimulating innovation until spring 2012.	This measure will contribute to improve competitiveness, modernize the infrastructures and encourage companies including small and medium enterprises to develop innovative products and services. The public sector should act as an intelligent customer, thus creating reference markets (especially in early stages). Furthermore, the public sector contributes to tackle grand societal challenges and improves its services ("services for citizens").
	Funding programme: Building research capacity in industry ("Forschungskompetenz für die Wirtschaft") is designed to support companies in the systematic development and qualification of their R&D staff. The focus is on SMEs. The three main program lines are: qualification seminars, qualification networks and tertiary level courses.	Development of high-skilled human capital, in addition the program aims at supporting cooperation between firms and tertiary research institutions and thereby contributing to a stronger emphasis of business-related research.
	The new RTD-Initiative "Smart Production" of the BMVIT has launched in 2011 a first comprehensive call addressing mainly enforced innovation with relation to flexible and adaptive production. This year a second call is planned, focusing on new materials, resource efficient manufacturing and zero fault production.	The main objective of "Smart Production" is to increase the competitiveness and energy efficiency of the manufacturing sector in Austria, fostering its capability to innovate thus establish a long term and sustainable basis for the manufacturing sector in Austria.
	Austria will seek to increase the national research intensity by one percentage point, towards 3.76% in 2020. The national research-, development- and demonstration programme "lighthouse projects e-mobility" also contributes to this ambitious target, by proving € 6 million in 2011. Vienna Biocenter – Vision 2020 (2011 – 2015): Strengthening	Total (2011 – 2015): € 18.432 million
	Research Infrastructure – Increase post gradual life science. Institute of Science and Technology Austria (2007 – 2016): Fostering Basic Research - Increasing Excellence. 	2012 (contributes also energy efficiency target).
Renewable energy target []	Green Electricity Act 2012: Notification by the European Commission on 8 February 2012, coming into force in Austria on 1 July 2012.	Rise of the share of renewable energies in the electricity consumption to 85% in the year 2020.
National energy efficiency target []	A bundle of measures consisting of energy management programmes, audits, counselling etc. has already started.	21,7 PJ p.a. until 2011
National early school leaving target []	Austria took part in the OECD Country Review on Overcoming School Failure: Policies that Work. An Austrian Country Report, which identified the national challenges and the current policies and measures, was published in 2011; the concluding recommendations of the OECD experts will be released in the next months (http://www.oecd.org/document/3/0,3746,en_2649_39263231_36_296195_1_1_1_1,00.html).

At EU level Austrian representatives participate in a new founded thematic working group on early school leaving which was implemented by the European Commission and the initiators of the Policy Framework for tackling early school leaving on a strategic level. The framework is based on three columns prevention, intervention and compensation (http://www.bmukk.gv.at/medienpool/20223/ppkonf esl gent sep t2010.pdf). The Austrian strategy is increasingly focusing on the first and the second column. Austria acts more and more on the suggestion of inter-ministerial and cross-sectoral cooperation to reduce early leaving from education and training.

Recently the Ministry of Social Affairs implemented with the support of the Ministry of Education a new measure called "Youth Coaching". The measure is put into practice by the "Bundessozialamt" and the corresponding institutions. Youth Coaching provides a form of support offered to students at the end of their compulsory schooling (it aims at the individual ninth grade and above), which helps young people to decide on a personally suitable education or training pathway. The measure aims at supporting students at risk of leaving school, but it also provides help for students that face psychosocial problems. The participation in Youth Coaching is voluntary for the students at risk and to notify the identified pupils to the Youth Coaches who are social workers or psychologists with special training in counselling. The measure Youth Coaching started in January 2012 covering the complete provinces of Vienna and Styria. Other provinces will follow in the next year. Further cooperation with Offices of Coordination from the Austrian Employment Pacts of other institutions is being discussed.
