Address: 1 Victoria Street, London SW1H 0ET

Tel: +44 207 215 5000

E-mail: enquiries@bis.gsi.gov.uk Website: http://www.bis.gov.uk/

In the United Kingdom, the Ministry responsible for UK and EU consumer policy and protection is the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS).

Other ministries have responsibility for elements of consumer protection but BIS has the general responsibility for consumer protection.

The Coalition Government wants to ensure that UK consumers are treated fairly, know their rights and can use them effectively, and that consumer law is fair to both consumers and business. To achieve this, a number of changes will have to occur and BIS will be consulting on the changes in 2011. http://www.bis.gov.uk/policies/consumer-issues

Competition and consumer policy are both areas of vital importance for citizens, for business and for the economic growth on which we all depend. Empowered consumers and fair competition policy drive our competitive markets, which promote efficiency and innovation in business. The Coalition Government is committed to saving public money wherever possible and rationalising the number of public bodies. http://nds.coi.gov.uk/content/Detail.aspx?ReleaseID=415972&NewsAreaID=2

Website: www.citizensadvice.org.uk

The Citizens Advice Service and Citizens Advice Service Scotland are independent charities and membership organisations and are the UK's largest advice-giving service. They give advice on a large number of issues including consumer rights. Through their network of local Citizens Advice Bureaux they provide free, independent, confidential and impartial advice face-to-face, by telephone and e-mail and through their website. The individual Bureaux receive most of their funding from local Government. Citizens Advice also contributes to the development of Government policy through campaigning, publicity and Parliamentary work.

1.5. CONSUMER MEDIA

Visual media, print media and the web are all important vehicles for consumer awareness.

The most important websites are:

http://www.consumerdirect.gov.uk/

www.bis.gov.uk/

www.oft.gov.uk

www.tradingstandards.gov.uk

http://www.consumerfocus.org.uk/

http://www.which.co.uk/

www.citizensadvice.org.uk

Moreover there are currently a number of television programmes which are focused on consumer harm. These include 'Watchdog' and 'Rogue Traders', 'Old Dogs, New Tricks'.

More details about these programmes can be found at the BBC Consumer Website Page. www.bbc.co.uk/consumer/

Other independent websites provide advice for consumers on saving money for instance 'moneysavingexpert' is just one example: http://www.moneysavingexpert.com

In terms of Government activity, the Consumer Direct website is the main source of information and advice for consumers.

See www.consumerdirect.gov.uk

1.6. REDRESS BODIES: COURTS AND ADRS

Courts

Criminal prosecutions can be brought by Trading Standards to either Magistrates Courts or to the Crown Court. A case brought to the Crown Court, must involve the Crown Prosecution Service. Fines and imprisonment are possible penalties for breaches of consumer protection law in the Crown Court. Magistrates Courts can impose a maximum fine.

Consumers are entitled to seek civil redress in a County Court (Sheriff Court in Scotland). If a claim is for £5,000 or less (£3,000 or less in Scotland), it can be dealt with as a small claim using the Court Service's 'small claims track'. This procedure can be a relatively simple and informal way of seeking redress. If the value of a claim is above the small claims limit, those taking cases will probably need representation in court.

A diagram of the UK courts system can be found at the following web link: http://www.hmcourts-service.gov.uk/docs/court_structure.pdf

In Scotland consumers can pursue a case in the Sheriff Court www.scotcourts.gov.uk http://www.tradingstandards.gov.uk/cgi-bin/calitem.cgi?file=ADV1012-0100.txt

• Alternative Dispute Resolution

There are a large number of different methods and providers of alternative dispute resolution services in the UK; more than can usefully be identified here. For example many trade associations offer ADR services. Ombudsman schemes exist for some sectors including financial services, estate agents and legal services. ADR schemes are also offered as part of the Small Claims service run by courts.

• ADR Directories

The attached web link to ADR Now provides a Directory of these services under headings such as arbitration, conciliation, mediation and ombudsmen. Website: http://www.adrnow.org.uk/go/Section_4.html

A Directory of approved UK ADR bodies is also available from the UK European Consumer Centre: http://www.ukecc.net/sub.asp?id=217

The Ministry of Justice provides details about alternative dispute resolution in the UK on its website at http://www.justice.gov.uk/whatwedo/alternativedisputeresolution.htm

Tel: +44 845 722 4499

E-mail: consumercodes@oft.gsi.gov.uk Website: http://www.oft.gov.uk/codes

Self regulation makes up an important part of OFT's toolkit in making markets work well for consumers. The OFT's Consumer Codes Approval Scheme aims to promote and safeguard consumers' interests by helping them to identify traders who promise to deliver high customer service standards and have in place complaints handling procedures, including access to an independent redress mechanism should problems arise. The OFT has approved a number of codes in important sectors of consumer spend.

For example,

- The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders' (SMMT) New Car Code of Practice was approved in September 2004. SMMT represents large car manufacturers.
- o The Vehicle Builders and Repairers Association Limited's (VBRA) code of practice was approved in October 2004. The VBRA represent car body repairers.
- o The Direct Selling Association's (DSA) consumer code of practice was approved in December 2004.
- The Ombudsman for Estate Agents Company Ltd's (OEA) code of practice for residential sales was approved in September 2005. The OEA represent 85% of all estate agents in the UK.
- o The Carpet Foundation's code was approved in January 2007. The Carpet Foundation represents over 1000 carpet retailers.
- o Robert Bosch Ltd's code of practice was approved in July 2007. Bosch represents independent garages in the car repair and servicing sector.

- o British Association of Removers' (BAR) code was approved in February 2008. BAR is the trade body for professional removal and storage businesses representing over 650 members in the UK
- o Debt Managers Standards Association's (DEMSA) code was approved in December 2008. DEMSA currently has four members, who between them deal with around 38% of all fee-paying debt management cases handled in the UK.

2. Consumer policies

2.1. CONSUMER PROTECTION LEGISLATION

(Excluding that included within the scope of the review of the consumer acquis, please also note that only UK Acts of Parliament passed after 1988 are published on the internet at www.opsi.gov.uk)

Consumer Credit Act 1974

The Consumer Credit Act 1974 (as amended by the Consumer Credit Act 2006) regulates consumer credit and consumer hire agreements. Its protections apply to agreements between traders and individuals, sole traders, partnerships and unincorporated associations, but not agreements made between traders and corporate bodies such as limited companies.

The Act lays down rules covering:

- o the form and content of agreements;
- o credit advertising;
- o the method of calculating the Annual Percentage Rate (APR) of the Total Charge for Credit;
- o the procedures to be adopted in the event of default, termination, or early settlement; and
- o the unfair relationships test.

The Act also requires that all traders who make regulated agreements or exercise rights under a regulated agreement obtain a consumer credit licence from the Office of Fair Trading (OFT). Credit brokers, credit repair businesses, debt advisors, debt management businesses and others, may also require licences.

Appeals against OFT licensing decisions should be made to the Consumer Credit Appeals Tribunal (part of the Tribunals Service).

Local trading standards departments and the OFT enforce the Act. The OFT also produces guidance about the Act and its regulations. For further information contact local trading standards departments or the Office of Fair Trading.

• Consumer Credit Act 2006

http://www.opsi.gov.uk/acts/acts2006/20060014.htm

The Consumer Credit Act 2006 (which was fully implemented on 1 October 2008) establishes a fairer, clearer and more competitive market for consumer credit, updating consumer credit legislation that had been in place since the 1970s, and making it more relevant to today's consumers.

The Act was implemented in 3 phases:

- 6 April 2007: the remit of the Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS) was extended to cover consumer credit and the Unfair Relationships Test was introduced for new agreements.
- o 6 April 2008: the Office of Fair Trading's (OFT's) new strengthened licensing regime was introduced, the Consumer Credit Appeals Tribunal (for appeals against the OFT's licensing decisions) was established, the financial limit (of £25,000) was removed so all new credit agreements (unless specifically exempt) are regulated, and the Unfair Relationships Test was extended to all existing credit agreements.
- October 2008: a requirement for lenders to provide borrowers with much more information about their accounts on a regular basis, such as an annual statement and notices when consumers fall into arrears or incur a default sum was introduced, the OFT's regulation was extended to credit information and debt administration services which means debt administration and credit information

(repair) service providers need a consumer credit licence, and consumers can go to the courts asking for longer to pay back their loan (a time order) when they receive an arrears notice (prior to October, consumers could only seek a time order when they received a default notice).

• The Enterprise Act 2002

The Enterprise Act 2002 has wide-ranging implications for businesses and consumers. The Act made a number of important reforms, which were designed to crack down on abuses that harm customers and fair-trading businesses alike and thus encourage productivity and enterprise. Under Part 8 of the Enterprise Act, the Office of Fair Trading, Trading Standards Authorities, sectoral regulators and other designated enforcement bodies, can apply to the courts to stop traders infringing a wide range of consumer protection legislation where those infringements harm the collective interests of consumers.

• Estate Agents Act 1979

The Estate Agents Act regulates the conduct of estate agents in the course of estate agency work. It does not cover the letting of properties. The Act lays down the duties agents owe to clients - such as the passing on of offers, handling money and giving details of charges (and to third parties) such as disclosure of personal interest. Where an estate agent breaches certain provisions of the Act or has been convicted of certain criminal offences he can be banned by the OFT from doing estate agency work if the OFT considers him unfit to carry on such work. The OFT can also issue a Warning Order against an agent who has breached certain provisions of the Act, where such a breach is not serious enough to cause him to be prohibited but if repeated would be. In addition, the Act provides for a number of criminal offences. The OFT and the Trading Standards Service share powers to prosecute such offences; however in practice it is the Trading Standards Service which takes such action. In addition to these enforcement powers, breaches of the Act are also enforceable by Part 8 action under the Enterprise Act 2002.

• Hallmarking Act 1973

The Act, which provides protection for purchasers in relation to the marking and description of articles of or containing precious metals, makes it an offence, subject to certain exceptions, to supply or market an unhallmarked article with a description that it is wholly or partly made of gold, silver or platinum. It is also an offence to counterfeit dies and marks. Prosecutions for the above offences are brought by the Trading Standards Service.

• Weights and Measures Act 1985

The Act, which forms the backbone of the work of the Trading Standards Service in ensuring fair trade in the marketplace, gives weights and measures inspectors powers to test weighing and measuring equipment and makes it an offence in sales of relevant goods to deliver short weight or measure.

Consumers, Estate Agents and Redress Act 2007

The Consumers, Estate Agents and Redress (CEARA) Act 2007 creates a new, stronger and more coherent consumer advocacy body (Consumer Focus), introduces redress to the energy, postal services and estate agency sectors; and improves regulation of estate agents and doorstep selling.

• Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008

The Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008 came into force on 26 May 2008. They implement the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive (UCPD) in the UK, and replace several pieces of consumer protection legislation that were in force prior to 26 May 2008, including most of the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 and Part 3 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987. The Regulations prohibit traders in all sectors from engaging in unfair commercial (mainly sales and marketing) practices towards consumers and set a framework to ensure that traders act honestly and fairly towards their customers. The Regulations apply primarily to businesses that deal directly with consumers (but practices which occur higher up the supply chain are also covered where they directly affect, or are likely to directly affect, consumers).

Product safety legislation

• The General Product Safety Regulations 2005

http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2005/20051803.htm

These implement the EC General Product Safety Directive, apply to all consumer products which are not subject to specific product safety legislation. Products under its scope do not require CE Marking.

• The Toys (Safety) Regulations 1995

http://www.legislation.gov.uk/uksi/1995/204/contents/made

These implement the requirements of the EC toys safety Directive and require all toys supplied in the UK to satisfy safety requirements and bear the CE Marking as the manufacturer's or his authorised representative's declaration that they do.

• The Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 2008 (as amended)

http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2008/uksi_20081284_en_1

These implement the requirements of the EC Cosmetics Directive and require all cosmetics supplied in the UK to be safe. Manufacturers must have a safety assessment and a product information package available which may be requested by Enforcement Officers to show that products comply with the Regulations.

• Consumer Protection Act 1987 Part II

This is the primary legislation that enables product-specific safety regulations to be introduced. The CPA can sometimes be used to implement European legislation but is primarily used to introduce UK-only safety requirements. Some examples of the latter include:

The Fireworks (Safety) Regulations 1997 - as amended http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si1997/19972294.htm

National regulations that specify what type of fireworks can be sold to consumers, the standards they must meet, set a minimum age limit for supply, define professional fireworks etc.

• The Furniture and Furnishings (Fire) (Safety) Regulations 1988

National regulations that set levels of fire resistance for domestic upholstered furniture, mattresses, furnishings and other products containing upholstery.

Regulations: http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si1988/Uksi 19881324 en 1.htm Guide: http://www.berr.gov.uk/files/file24685.pdf

• The Nightwear (Safety) Regulations 1985

National regulations which apply to nightwear, including garments which are commonly worn as nightwear. They set compulsory fire resistance requirements for certain items of children's nightwear, such as nightdresses and dressing gowns, and optional requirements for items such as children's pyjamas and for adult nightwear. Guide:

 $\underline{http://www.berr.gov.uk/whatwedo/consumers/Safety/products/flammability/index.ht}$ ml

• The Children's Clothing (Hood Cords) Regulations 1976

National regulations which ban the use of hood cords drawn through the material in outer garments designed for very young children.

Food Safety Legislation

• The UK Food Labelling Regulations 1996

As amended, implementing Directive 2000/13/EC (SI 1996 No. 1499). www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si1996/Uksi_19961499_en_1.htm

These Regulations apply in England, Scotland and Wales. A separate but similar law applies in Northern Ireland.

• The Food Safety Act 1990

Weblink: www.opsi.gov.uk/acts/acts1990/Ukpga 19900016 en 1.htm#tcon

• The General Food Regulations 2004 (SI 2004 No. 3279)

Enforces the General Food Law Regulation (EC) 178/2002 Weblink: www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2004/20043279.htm

• The Food Hygiene (England) Regulations 2006 (SI 2006 No. 14)

Weblink: www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2006/20060014.htm

There is similar hygiene legislation for the other devolved administrations in the UK. There is a system of penalties, depending on the legislation that applies, the circumstances of the case and where the case is heard, i.e. either the Magistrates Court or the Crown Court depending upon the seriousness of the case or the choice of the defendant. A person convicted in the highest court for offences under the Food Safety Act 1990 or legislation made under the Act, the Crown Court, is liable to a maximum penalty of two years imprisonment or an unlimited fine or both. The penalties for offences under the European Communities Act 1972 or legislation made under that Act, such as the General Food Regulations 2004, are similar.

2.2. CONSUMER ORGANISATIONS

There is no single official definition or criterion in the UK for determining what a consumer organisation at national level is. The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills is responsible for the funding of and appointments to, the Consumer Focus, Consumer Focus Scotland and Consumer Focus Wales. Consumer Focus has close ties with the independent General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland.

The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills is also responsible for promoting and sponsoring the work of the Citizens Advice Bureau service through its funding of Citizens Advice in England and Wales and Citizens Advice Scotland in Scotland. Citizens Advice Northern Ireland is an independent organisation.

Consumer organisations and bodies have some powers in relation to taking action under the super-complaints procedure, in relation to consumer group claims.

• Super complaints

Section 11 of the Enterprise Act 2002 enables consumer bodies designated by the Secretary of State to submit "super-complaints" to the OFT where: they consider that there is any market feature, or combination of features, such as the structure of a market or the conduct of those operating within it, that is or appears to be significantly harming the interests of consumers.

Only those bodies that have been designated by the Secretary of State can bring a super complaint.

The super complaints process has been set up with the aim of strengthening the voice of consumers, as they are unlikely to have access individually to the kind of information necessary to judge whether markets are failing for them. Consumer groups can access individuals' complaints to form a judgment on whether there is a problem and then take the necessary action.

However, it is important to remember that any body can still bring complaints to the OFT and the OFT will deal with them. Super-complaints are simply a new route into the system – an initial "fast-tracking" to ensure that complaints about market failure which harms consumers are given consideration within a fixed time.

Which bodies have been designated so far?

The Consumers' Association (Which?), National Consumer Council and Citizens Advice were designated in July 2004. Energywatch and Watervoice were designated in January 2005. Postwatch, CAMRA and the General Consumer Council of Northern Ireland were designated in October 2005. In October 2008, Consumer Focus replaced the National Consumer Council, Energywatch and Postwatch. Consumer Focus is a designated body.

Further guidance on super complaints can be found at http://www.oft.gov.uk/advice_and_resources/resource_base/super-complaints/

• Consumer Group Claims

Section 19 of the Enterprise Act 2002 inserts a new section 47A into the Competition Act 1998 to empower certain 'specified bodies' to bring proceedings for claims for damages before the Competition Appeals Tribunal (CAT), on behalf of a group of two or more named individual consumers.

Such claims may be brought before the CAT in respect of specific infringements (set out in the Act) which concern agreements, decisions and concerted practices which have the object or effect of preventing, restricting or distorting competition, and conduct which amounts to the abuse of a dominant position.

Claims may only be brought before the CAT after the OFT or European Commission (or the CAT on appeal from the OFT) has ruled that an infringement has actually taken place.

• Representative actions

The UK Government conducted a public consultation seeking views on the implementation of representative actions in consumer protection cases in 2006. A summary of responses to the consultation can be accessed at: http://www.berr.gov.uk/files/file45051.pdf

In July 2009 the UK Government published a White Paper "A Better Deal for Consumers" which sets out plans to appoint a Consumer Advocate who will coordinate work to educate consumers and be a champion for groups of consumers who have suffered a loss at the hands of a business. It is proposed that the Consumer Advocate will have the power to take legal actions on behalf of a group of consumers following a breach of consumer protection law if other routes for obtaining compensation have been tried or judged inappropriate

2.3. ENFORCEMENT/REDRESS

• Trading Standards

Local Authority Trading Standards Services protect consumers and honest traders by ensuring that trade is carried out lawfully, fairly and safely. Trading Standards Departments are a function of local government and are funded by local tax money. Each Local Authority is responsible for its service and decides its priorities and resources. In recent years the Government has put in money to improve Trading Standards enforcement via a Modernisation Fund.

Enforcement Orders

Under Part 8 of the Enterprise Act, the Office of Fair Trading, Trading Standards Authorities, sectoral regulators and other designated enforcement bodies, can apply to the courts to stop traders infringing a wide range of consumer protection legislation where those infringements harm the collective interests of consumers.

Part 8 of the Enterprise Act replaced Part III of the Fair Trading Act 1973 and the Stop Now Orders (EC Directive) Regulations 2001. It also extended the scope of the Stop Now Order enforcement regime to include a wider range of domestic consumer protection legislation. These orders are known as Enforcement Orders. Breach of an Order is a contempt of court and could incur a fine or imprisonment.

Enforcers can also use Enforcement Orders to clamp down on traders who fail to carry out a service with reasonable care and skill. The Office of Fair Trading is responsible for coordinating enforcement action under the Regulations. Further information on the role and responsibilities of the OFT is available on the OFT web site at www.oft.gov.uk

Who can use Part 8 powers?

Under Part 8 of the Act three types of enforcers are identified:

- General Enforcers. In addition to the OFT, the Trading Standards Service in Great Britain and Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI) in Northern Ireland are specified in Part 8 as having the power to act as general enforcers.
- (ii) Designated Enforcers. A designated enforcer is any public or private body in the UK which the Secretary of State designates in a Statutory Instrument, having identified the person or body has the protection of the collective interests of consumers as one of its purposes.

The Secretary of State has designated the following bodies as Part 8 enforcers by a Statutory Instrument:

- o The Civil Aviation Authority
- o The Director General of Electricity Supply for NI
- o The Director General of Gas for Northern Ireland
- o Ofcom
- o The Director General of Water Services
- o The Gas and Electricity Markets Authority
- o The Information Commissioner
- o The Office of Rail Regulation
- o The Financial Services Authority
- o Consumers' Association (Which?)

A public body will only be granted designated enforcement powers if it is independent. By granting a public body designated enforcement powers, it is deemed that the body is conclusively identified as a public body for the purposes of Part 8.

A private organisation may be designated as an enforcer only if it fulfils the criteria specified by the Secretary of State in a Statutory Instrument.

(iii) Community Enforcers. Community enforcers are entities from other EEA states that are listed in the Official Journal of the European Communities. These enforcers may apply for injunctions in other member states.

2.4. Information and education

Consumer Direct

The Consumer Direct website provides consumer education information. http://www.consumerdirect.gov.uk

• National policies

The Enterprise Act 2002 gives the Office of Fair Trading powers to use consumer education to support its work in making markets work well for consumers.

http://www.oft.gov.uk/oft at work/partnership working/consumer-alliance/

The OFT's Consumer Education Framework and Strategy can be found at: http://www.oft.gov.uk/shared_oft/consumer_education/oft753.pdf

The OFT formed an Alliance for consumer education in 2005 as part of its consumer education strategy. The Alliance brings together organisations and individuals who work with consumers, enabling them to coordinate work, share ideas and good practice and make best use of resources. Membership of the Alliance includes organisations from:

- o business, business associations and professional bodies
- o consumer and campaigning organisations
- o trading standards and local authorities
- o academic institution and educationalists
- o consumer education practitioners
- o regulators and other agencies
- o government and public bodies.

More details about the Alliance, including a database of consumer education projects around the UK, can be found at:

http://www.oft.gov.uk/oft_at_work/partnership_working/consumer-alliance/alliance/

2.5. Information gathering/research

Below is a list of the major pieces of work that has been undertaken recently.

• Undertaken by Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS)

- Examining best practice in consumer policy (with OECD Committee on Consumer Policy) – multi-phase project with first phase on best practice in awareness-raising completed, second phase on effective penalties (completed).
