Consumer Protection Act

Chapter 5

Section 16

(1) The buyer shall not invoke a defect in the goods if he/she does not notify the seller of the same within a reasonable time after he/she discovered or ought to have discovered the defect. However, the notice of defect may always be given within two months of the buyer's discovery of the defect; it may also be given to the business who has sold the goods on behalf of the seller or assumed liability for the characteristics of the goods.
