..This generations life is the next generation's heritage.....

..Dear Granny.....

..I hope to God that you have learned loads of computer skills in the day centre by now! I'm not jaking at all because I'll be relying on you!

..I was both surprised and doubtful when we were learning about cultural heritage in class this morning. The teacher showed us a collection of folklore that you can now get on the internet. What was it called again? The School Collection, or the Schools? I can't remember exactly. But you would know granny.... Didn't your father and grandfather have a close connection to it! That's why I'm sending you this email.....

..Why didn't you ever tell me the origin of why people call you Máire Mhic? I always thought that that was a very strange nickname without even knowing it, granny, you're keeping my heritage secret! Last summer, when we were together on that small island off the coast of Dubrovnic.....

in Croatia, visiting the Iron Throne from the television series Game of Thrones, you could have told me that your great-grandfather was a smith and that your grandfather was a well-known traditional story-teller called Tomás. Mhic an Ghabha

For whatever reason instead of finding out about my family's story from you, granny, I'm reading about it in a copy book that your father handwrote when he was a primary school student in the thirties. And now the whole world can see them on the internet. Such is life.

I was really interested in the importance of the smith ^{long ago} ~~in~~ the past. It was believed that he knew the art of healing and that he could make a charm called the Nine Irons - that's what got me thinking about the Iron Throne. I wonder if you ever saw the Nine Irons, granny? It's a charm bracelet with little iron tools on it.

I have another question for you, granny, and that is ~~have~~ did you ever hear your grandfather telling stories? If you and, I'm sure he was excellent! His old stories opened my eyes wide with wonder. Weren't they a lot like adventures you would see in fantasy films today...

Soon we will be working together online, granny. Our teacher asked us to do our own folklore project, something to leave to the next generation and YOU will be my source of information, granny. Have the computer ready, granny, because we will have to do some of the work on it... I have thousands of questions.

Your inquisitive grand-daughter,

Anna
