

2024 Rule of Law Report - targeted stakeholder consultation

Fields marked with * are mandatory.

Introduction

The annual Rule of Law Report lies at the centre of the Annual Rule of Law Cycle, which acts as a preventive tool, deepening multilateral dialogue and joint awareness of rule of law issues. So far, four editions of the Rule of Law Report have been published in 2020, 2021, 2022 and 2023.

The Commission would like to invite stakeholders to provide contributions to the 2024 Rule of Law Report. This survey provides information on the type of information and topics that will be covered in the 2024 Rule of Law Report, in order to allow stakeholders to provide input. More targeted input may be requested at a later stage of preparation of the 2024 Rule of Law Report, including in the context of country visits, or bilateral contacts.

The 2024 Rule of Law Report will continue to deepen the assessment under the existing four pillars, and will also follow-up on the implementation of the recommendations to Member States, that were issued as part of the 2023 Rule of Law Report. The contribution to be provided should include (1) information on measures taken to implement the recommendations addressed to the Member State in the 2023 Rule of Law report, as well as developments with regard to the points raised in the respective country chapter and (2) any other significant developments since January 2023<sup>[1]</sup> falling under the ‘type of information’ outlined in section II.

The input should consist of a short summary, if possible in English, covering the areas referred to below. Legislation or other documents may be referenced with a link. Contributions should focus on significant developments since the last Rule of Law Report both as regards the legal framework and its implementation in practice.

[1] Unless the information was already submitted in the input for the previous Rule of Law Reports.

Type of information

D) Any other relevant developments

- Respondents are free to add any further information, which they deem relevant; however, this should be short and to the point.

Please also indicate whether the developments reported are linked to the implementation of reforms and investments under the RRP, where applicable.

If there are no changes, it is sufficient to indicate this and the information covered in the contributions for the previous Rule of Law Reports should not be repeated.

Questions on horizontal developments

In this section, you are invited to provide information on general horizontal developments or trends, both positive and negative, covering all or several Member States. In particular, you could mention issues that are common to several Member States, as well as best practices identified in one Member State that could be replicated. Moreover, you could refer to your activities in the area of the four pillars and sub-topics (an overview of all sub-topics can be found below), and, if you represent a Network of national organisations, to the support you might have provided to one of your national members.

In recent times, the rule of law has been under immense pressure in some European Union (EU) Member States, where we have witnessed widespread interference in the judiciary, unfair dismissal of judges, state control of the media, nepotism and corruption.

While the governments in Hungary and Poland are the main culprits of these violations, other countries are also experiencing the occurrence of serious democratic backsliding. The EU has not been able to prevent this systematic erosion of democratic values and defend the rule of law in all Member States, with its existing toolbox for managing these challenges being put to the test. Also, too often the EU institutions have taken into consideration a too narrow definition of rule of law. Compliance with the rule of law is essential to protecting and fostering democracy in the European Union. Furthermore, violations of the rule of law have extensive implications on economic activity at large, the competitiveness of Member States, the appropriate use of EU funds. Violating the rule of law also undermines trust in democracy.

So, the EU needs an independent and adequately equipped authority to monitor compliance with the EU's fundamental values and the respect for the rule of law in all EU Member States. In this context, the annual rule of law reports by the European Commission should be further institutionalised, with the Member States required to respond to and take actions to address the Commission's recommendations without delay and by including countries negotiating accession in the Rule of Law Mechanism.

Member States must ensure that their judicial systems effectively apply EU law and are their national judiciaries are independent, or face consequences. For this reason, we call for the full application of the rule of law conditionality to the Multiannual Financial Framework and retroactively to any violations of the rule of law or of judicial independence, which have occurred since its introduction on 1 January 2021. This should be done as soon as possible to protect the misuse of European funds, as well defend the rule of law.

No government is above the law. Weaker checks and balances risk deteriorating the rule of law and citizens' fundamental rights. The European Rule of Law Mechanism was born out of the real danger that political interference on the independence of the judiciary, systemic and unchecked corruption, the deterioration of media pluralism as well as the continuous attacks against civil society in EU Member States threaten the EU's financial interests.

The rule of law also requires effective, independent and impartial institutions (e.g., courts, inspection services and bodies) and mechanisms of redress so that these rights are justiciable, and their legal protection can be ensured. The longstanding role of social partners in setting, applying and enforcing these rights, particularly through social dialogue and collective bargaining, should be fully recognised.

Civil society also promotes active participation, good governance, transparency, and accountability. The EU should support civil society and social partners in their work and strengthen civil society's capacity to monitor the rule of law in Member States (and beyond). Any monitoring authority feeding into an annual cycle on democracy, the rule of law and fundamental rights, should draw on the input provided by civil society organisations and social partners.

Investment in civil society organisations and social partners is critical to ensure they can successfully undertake their duties. The EU should increase its support for the work of civil society at the European and national level and its capacity to promote a functioning rule of law.

Furthermore, the rule of law report methodology should include a chapter on civic space and democracy at work. Inclusion of such a focus would add to the country specific recommendations, providing knowledge and accountability for Member State responses and a link to citizens.

III. Media pluralism and media freedom

Please provide information on measures taken to follow-up on the recommendations received in the 2023 Report regarding media pluralism and media freedom (if applicable)

Actors in the media have a crucial role to play to handle and debunk fake news and misinformation. The European Media Freedom Act has introduced a novel set of rules to protect media pluralism and independence in the EU. The EU should provide funding and support for independent media outlets to ensure they have the resources necessary to produce high-quality and fact-based journalism, including through the easing of market entry barriers. This should include investigative journalism, which can help to expose and counter disinformation. Financial assistance for media outlets should be consistent, result-oriented and coherent. Support to quality media outlets at regional and local levels must be given as they require both financial and professional assistance to operate effectively; they are key, as they speak about the daily life of their communities.

Media outlets must also be held accountable for their reporting by imposing stricter sanctions against media spreading disinformation and against Member States which fail in due diligence against misinformation (for instance, by allowing official media to spread misinformation, tolerating media spreading misinformation despite complaints, etc.). The EU should increase its financial support for organisations actively involved in fact-checking and continue its support in the development of fact-checking initiatives and tools which can help identify and counter disinformation. Alongside these regulations, the EU should encourage the media industry to adopt self-regulatory measures, such as codes of conduct and ethical guidelines to ensure the quality, accuracy and impartiality of news reporting. The EU can also support media self-regulation bodies and provide incentives for media outlets that comply with their standards.

European Digital Media Organisation (EDMO) hubs are also valuable initiatives that ensure a strong link between the EU and Member States in fighting disinformation. Encouraging greater engagement between them and civil society organisations (CSOs) is crucial. The EU should address the issue of media ownership concentration, not least by ensuring transparency of ownerships, including that of social media platforms. The ownership of media holdings must be made public to identify any malign actors that conceal their identities in offshore locations or through hedge funds. Ensuring this transparency will enhance accountability and contribute to demanding greater responsibility for the dissemination of information.

IV. Other institutional issues related to checks and balances

Please provide information on measures taken to follow-up on the recommendations received in the 2023 Report regarding the system of checks and balances (if applicable)

The rule of law framework enshrined in Article 7 TEU enables the EU to suspend certain membership rights if it can be established that there has been “a serious and persistent breach” of the European values listed in Article 2 TEU by a Member State. As the mechanism requires unanimity in the Council to be triggered, effective action is rendered unattainable due to Member States’ vetoes, a serious hindrance that undermines the rule of law when individual Member States dilute, delay, and veto decisions which benefit the EU as a whole.

For this reason, building on the recommendations from the Conference on the Future of Europe, EU decision-making needs to shift from unanimity to qualified majority voting (QMV) in the Council for the enforcement of the rule of law framework. Shifting from unanimity to QMV in the Council would ensure not only the improvement of the democratic functioning of the EU but it will also help address more effectively violations of the rule of law in Member States. Therefore, eliminating the veto power for the individual Member State would ensure not just the improvement of the democratic functioning of the EU but it will also help address more effectively violations of the rule of law in Member States.

A. The process for preparing and enacting laws

5000 character(s) maximum

D. The enabling framework for civil society

Measures regarding the framework for civil society organisations and human rights defenders (e.g. legal framework and its application in practice incl. registration and dissolution rules)

5000 character(s) maximum

The EU should support civil society and social partners in their work and strengthen civil society's capacity to monitor the rule of law in Member States. Civil society organisations continue to face challenges with funding, negative narratives and restrictions in operating space in some Member States. Civil society also promotes active participation, good governance, transparency, and accountability.

The EU should support civil society and social partners in their work and strengthen civil society's capacity to monitor the rule of law in Member States (and beyond). Any monitoring authority feeding into an annual cycle on democracy, the rule of law and fundamental rights, should draw on the input provided by civil society organisations and social partners.

The rule of law report methodology should include a chapter on civic space and democracy at work. Inclusion of such a focus would add to the country specific recommendations, providing knowledge and accountability for Member State responses and a link to citizens.

Moreover, we recommend institutionalising the rule of law dialogue, with the inclusion of civil society organisations and social partners and welcome the initiative to open the rule of law framework to candidate states prior to their EU accession.

Rules and practices having an impact on the effective operation and safety of civil society organisations and human rights defenders. This includes measures for protection from attacks – verbal, physical or on-line –, intimidation, legal threats incl. SLAPPs, negative narratives or smear campaigns, measures capable of affecting the public perception of civil society organisations, etc. It also includes measures to monitor threats or attacks and dedicated support services

5000 character(s) maximum

Organisation of financial support for civil society organisations and human rights defenders (e.g. framework to ensure access to funding, and for financial viability, taxation/incentive/donation systems, measures to ensure a fair distribution of funding)

5000 character(s) maximum

Rules and practices on the participation of civil society organisations and human rights defenders to the decision-making process (e.g. measures related to dialogue between authorities and civil society, participation of civil society in policy development and decision-making, consultation, dialogues, etc.)

The EU should support civil society and social partners in their work and strengthen civil society's capacity to monitor the rule of law in Member States. Civil society organisations continue to face challenges with funding, negative narratives and restrictions in operating space in some Member States. Civil society also promotes active participation, good governance, transparency, and accountability.

The EU should support civil society and social partners in their work and strengthen civil society's capacity to monitor the rule of law in Member States (and beyond). Any monitoring authority feeding into an annual cycle on democracy, the rule of law and fundamental rights, should draw on the input provided by civil society organisations and social partners.

The rule of law report methodology should include a chapter on civic space and democracy at work. Inclusion of such a focus would add to the country specific recommendations, providing knowledge and accountability for Member State responses and a link to citizens.

Moreover, we recommend institutionalising the rule of law dialogue, with the inclusion of civil society organisations and social partners and welcome the initiative to open the rule of law framework to candidate states prior to their EU accession.
